

COUNTY MUST PAY FOR IMPOUNDING OF BALLOT BOXES

Barry States That Expenses For New Paraphernalia Must Be Borne By Commissioners.

Washington, Aug. 10.—(AP)—William S. Vare, senator-elect from Pennsylvania, appealed today to senators to cooperate in the efforts being made to preserve all the ballots in the Pennsylvania senatorial election last November which is contested by his Democratic opponent, William B. Wilson.

Expenses incurred in connection with the impounding of the ballot boxes and other paraphernalia used in last November's general election in Adams county will have to be borne by the county, according to a letter received by R. E. Deardorff, clerk to the county commissioners, from David S. Barry, sergeant-at-arms of the United States senate.

Mr. Barry's letter to the commissioners followed a similar piece of correspondence to Judge D. P. McPherson asking him to impound the ballots cast in Adams county last November for transportation to Washington later to be used in connection with the contested election of Senator-elect Vare by William B. Wilson, his Democratic opponent.

Bill To Court

Mr. Barry's letter to the county commissioners follows:

"In behalf of the senate committee on privileges and elections who desire to take possession of and guard all ballots cast at the election in November, 1926, for United States senator, I respectfully request that you cooperate with the court of common pleas, in carrying out its order for the deposit at the county seat, subject to the order of the court, all ballot boxes, tally sheets, registration lists and all documentary paraphernalia to be held subject to the order of the sergeant-at-arms for transportation to Washington.

"A bill for any necessary expenses incurred may be submitted to the court."

Lists About Ready

The commissioners' clerk said he would have a complete list of the custodians of the ballot boxes used last November ready for Judge McPherson late today or Thursday. Judge McPherson asked that such a list be given him to that he could proceed to issue the order for the bringing of the boxes to the commissioners' office.

Judge McPherson, unlike some judges in the state, has not raised the question of authority to impound the boxes nor refused to order the ballots

Cashtown Firemen Run Chances Of Windstorm by Inviting All County Candidates to Picnic

Gallery To Be Provided For Office Seekers In Coming Primary To Be Reinforced To Withstand Blasts Of Oratory By Which Aspirants Hope To Tell How County Would Be Run If Given A Chance.

The Cashtown firemen are a reckless set of fire fighters.

Not satisfied with having enlisted their services when necessary to fighting fires, running the chances of being drenched or worse, burned, they have extended an open invitation to all of the candidates for county offices to be present at their supper and festival at Orrtanna next Saturday. And they are serious in their invitation.

Not satisfied with the possibility of having an occasional seeker after the political plums present to brighten up their gathering with his expostulations of what he has to offer the county voters they have broadcast an invitation to all of the candidates to be present during the afternoon and evening and air their views on how the county would be run if they would be given a chance to place their hand at the wheel.

A gallery will be provided where each and every aspirant after a political melon can go on display and speak his piece without fear of being halted by the police.

And, too, it doesn't matter the political faith of the office seeker, just so he has something to say, and as there have been very few men in the present primary race who have been accused of emulating Coolidge's silent proclivities, the air is sure to be blue. The invitation extended by C. U. Spence and George A. Herring, the committee in charge, inviting the candidates follows:

Orrtanna, Pa., August 9, 1927.
To all Candidates for Office in Adams County:
Greetings:

The Cashtown community fire company will hold a supper and festival at Orrtanna, Saturday afternoon and evening, August 13.

You are cordially invited to be present on this occasion, at which time you will be given ample opportunity to present your claims to every one in the community.

The committee in charge will provide a gallery where all candidates will be on display.

There are no restrictions as to your brand of politics. All parties will be welcomed by the committee and given the freedom of the grounds.

Sincerely,
C. U. SPENCE,
GEORGE A. HERRING,
Committee.

ASK BIDS FOR NEW PARTITION

Improvement to Lobby of Post-office Would Stop Inconvenience of Cold Weather.

Bids will be opened August 27 at 2 o'clock in the postoffice here for the erection of a new glazed partition with a door in the lobby of the post-office.

The partition which is to cost not more than $500, will be erected in the north end of the lobby, just in front of the registry and money order windows.

According to postoffice authorities, that portion of the building in which the registry and money order departments are located is difficult to heat in cold weather and is subject to constant drafts, apparently unable to be checked.

Work of repairing the postoffice furnace, which broke down on one of the coldest days last winter, is being rushed to completion. The contract is held by A. B. Plank.

COL. DAVIS ABLE TO BE AT OFFICE DURING MORNING

Undecided On What Course To Pursue In Myrick Affair Pending Investigation.

After more than a month's absence, caused by a severe attack of bronchial pneumonia, Colonel Edgar E. Davis, superintendent of the Gettysburg National park, today was at his office in the postoffice building for a short time.

Colonel Davis said he was feeling as good as could be expected, adding that he expected to spend a short time each afternoon at his desk until his full strength returns. Subordinates in the superintendent's office commented upon the apparently splendid physical condition of Colonel Davis, and all of them expressed the hope that he would soon be able to be back at work at his regular hours.

Through Assistant Superintendent James B. Aumen, Colonel Davis has kept in close touch with battlefield work and affairs since he was taken ill July 7, except for a period when he was critically ill at the Warner hospital.

Colonel Davis took up his duties here July 1. Over the Fourth of July, he contracted a heavy chest cold in the Shenandoah Valley where he spent the holiday. Upon his return to Gettysburg, he became ill at the Eagle hotel where he had been living, preparatory to moving his household goods to Gettysburg.

When his condition became more serious, he was removed to the Warner hospital where for a time he hovered between life and death. He was discharged from the hospital two weeks ago, going to his home on East Lincoln avenue to recuperate before returning to his duties.

Colonel Davis would say little about the recommendation of Burgess C. A. Heiges that J. A. Myrick, a battlefield guide, be temporarily suspended for alleged violations of a borough ordinance prohibiting certain forms of tourist solicitation. "If Myrick is to be punished at all," the superintendent said, "such punishment should come from the borough authorities, since it was a borough ordinance which he is charged with violating. I want to have a talk with Myrick before I say what disciplinary action might be taken."

Admits the Untruth
To The Editor Times:

We were one of the dry individuals that flooded the county with dry literature, upholding the Volstead law. We declared that if the state or United States upheld the Volstead law, and if it became a law, the churches would be filled to overflowing, our jails and penitentiaries and correctional institutions would be empty. In our 76 years as an American citizen, we must admit our grand mistake. We notice that the Waynesboro correspondent to the Philadelphia Inquirer says the enforcement officers have been so active during six months that a larger county jail must be built. The old jail has been crowded to overflowing for several weeks. Statistics show that more than 65 per cent of arrests are made for liquor violations. We must admit that we see more men under the influence of something, if not booze, something worse, today.

SCHOOL TAXES ARE ROLLING IN

Collector Ogden Gratified With Response Since Notices Have Been Sent Out.

William Ogden, borough tax collector, today said he is "gratified" with the response local residents are making to his notices that school taxes are now due.

Mr. Ogden said that even before he sent out the notices on the first of the month, informing local residents that their school taxes were due and payable at par before September 30, some persons had sought him out to make their payments.

The school tax duplicate for 1927 is approximately $54,000 and, according to the collector, he has received a greater percentage of the total at this time than on the same date in any year in which he has held office.

The general school tax is 15 mills this year. In addition there is a 3 mills building tax and the usual $3 per capita tax, collected from everyone over 21 years.

Borough and county tax payments for 1927 also are ahead of last year, Mr. Ogden said.

A five per cent penalty will be added to school, borough and county taxes paid after September 30. No rebate is made in school taxes.

2 GYPSY WOMEN GET $410 BY RUSE FROM CASHIER

Give Boiling Springs Bank Official Good Luck Token, Then Disappear With Cash.

Carlisle, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Efforts of state police today proved fruitless in their search for gypsy women who are suspected of having taken $410 from the Boiling Springs state bank yesterday while pretending to place a "lucky nickel" in the drawer to bring good luck and fortune to Clayton Strickler, the cashier.

Nearly 40 gypsies camping at Silver Springs were detained, but were released when Strickler was unable to identify any of them.

Two gypsy women gave a good luck token to Clayton Strickler, cashier of the Boiling Springs state bank, Tuesday afternoon and twenty minutes after they had left that institution Mr. Strickler discovered that $410 had gone with them.

He immediately notified the Cumberland county authorities and they in turn notified all of the towns within a radius of fifty miles to have officers on the lookout for a band of gypsies.

One camp of nomads was found near Mechanicsburg and another group, traveling in two automobiles, was picked up in this county by state officers and brought to Gettysburg, but the women who were sought for the robbery were not members of either party.

The gypsies who were brought here were detained for shortly after 5 o'clock in the afternoon until after 7:30 o'clock in the evening when they were permitted to leave after Mr. Strickler had failed to identify the women in the party as either of the ones which had paid him a visit in the afternoon.

A thorough search of the camp near Mechanicsburg failed to reveal the women.

Cashier Strickler feels certain one of the women snatched the money when she forced her way behind the counter under pretense of "wishing him luck" with a nickel she rubbed and insisted upon giving him.

The women entered the bank about 2:30 o'clock, when the only persons in the bank besides Strickler were his 9-year-old daughter, Gladys, and her playmate, Helen Carl, who were waiting to accompany him to his home after the bank was closed.

Ask for Gold Pieces

The women were dressed in typical gypsy costume, with bells and gold lace decorating their brightly-colored garments. One wore a loose waist, and she is the one suspected of taking the money.

Upon entering, they asked for $2.50 gold pieces. When told the bank had none of the coins, the women asked permission to tell Strickler's fortune. Strickler refused and ordered the women from the bank.

One woman then asked for a coin bag, which Strickler gave her. The second insisted upon paying for the bag, but Strickler refused.

The woman with the loose waist then forced her way behind the counter, insisting Strickler accept a "lucky" nickel, which she rubbed to "wish him luck."

Garden Demonstrations Prove New Method Best

Two vegetable gardening demonstrations, held in the county, were productive of the fact that long rows, arranged for crop succession, were easier and more economical to cultivate than in the ordinary bed garden. Jesse M. Hittington, vegetable gardening specialist of State college, was in charge of the two demonstrations.

He discussed varieties, diversification of crops, and rotation, emphasizing the importance of immediately planting some successive crops for winter storage.

Plane Crashes, One Flier Known Dead

San Diego, Cal., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Less than 15 minutes after they hopped off at North Island for their flight to Oakland, Lieut. George C. Bell and R. R. Waggener, U. S. N., crashed to the ground near the end of Point Loma, their plane immediately bursting into flames and causing the death of at least one of the airmen.

The plane was entered in the Dole flight to Honolulu. Word of the crash was sent to the North Island naval air station and a rescue party left at once. A marine detachment was hurried to the scene.

Flames from the plane set fire to the surrounding brush and a call was sent to the fire company at Ocean Beach.

According to the first word received the body of one of the airmen was found near the plane.

Judges who have ordered the ballot boxes concentrated at their respective county seats are Thomas C. Hare, Blair county, and J. Frank E. Hause, Chester county.

As yet Judge McPherson has not given the formal order for the Adams county boxes to be brought in, but it is understood that he is contemplating such action as soon as he receives the list of custodians from Mr. Deardorff.

3 Want Information

Judges of three counties, however, asked for a more formal petition from the Senate for court action, before issuing any order. These judges are Watson E. Davison, of Franklin county; Charles M. Culver, of Bradford county, and Paul N. Schaeffer, of Berks county.

Three other judges raised the question of payment by the Senate of expenses incident to preservation of the ballots and gathering the boxes. These were Judge Frank H. Strouss, of Northumberland county; Judge Henry A. Fuller, Luzerne county, and Judge Frank E. Reader, Beaver county.

In two other counties, judges are on vacation and decision will await their return. These judges the Henry C. Niles, York county, and David H. Barber, of Carbon county.

counter, she advanced with the nickel. While the other woman, who had remained at the front of the room, distracted Strickler's attention by another question, the woman with the loose waist opened the cash drawer and placed the "lucky" nickel inside. Although Strickler did not see her snatch any money, he believes she slipped packs of bills into her waist while placing the nickel in the drawer.

The women then left the bank, entered an automobile and drove away. Twenty minutes later Strickler discovered $410 in bills of $50, $20 and $5 denominations was missing. A total of $2600 was in the cash drawer at the time.

SACCO-VANZETTI MAY ESCAPE THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

Justice Sanderson Postpones Until Tomorrow Morning Decision On Exception.

Boston, Aug. 10.—(AP)—The possibility that the execution of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti might be postponed from early tomorrow morning was seen when Judge Sanderson of the supreme court announced today that he would not give his decision until tomorrow morning on a move by defense counsel.

He is to decide whether he shall permit a bill of exceptions from his refusal to grant writs of error and habeas corpus to go to the full bench of the supreme court.

Governor Fuller at 12:45 p. m., however, had made no announcement of his decision on a petition for a stay of execution.

The executive council was at the state house this afternoon prepared to hear any communication from the governor. Any recommendation for a stay must be approved by the council. Governor Fuller also had called to the state house all but one of the former attorney generals of the state who are living that he might have the benefit of their advice.

The electric chair at the Charlestown state prison, its straps freshly oiled and its electrodes brightly burnished, waited to claim the two adjudged murderers.

Celestino Madeiros, a third slayer, who was also to go to the chair early tomorrow morning and whose life has several times been prolonged because of his self-identification with the case of the other two, awaited doom with something akin to equanimity.

Sacco, his three week fast plainly telling on him, has stared dully at the ceiling of his narrow cell apparently indifferent to everything. His guards expressed the opinion that his only hope is to "cheat" the chair. Vanzetti, whose hunger strike has not been so rigid as that of his companion, has paced his cell feverishly and has been largely preoccupied with numerous letters. Like Sacco, however, he has stopped to believe that escape is possible.

New York, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Mounted policemen last night broke up an attempt of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers to parade to city hall. The parade, for which permission had been refused, started after a peaceful protest meeting had been staged in Union Square.

A crowd estimated by police at 2,000 moved along Fifth street to Fifth avenue and marched seven blocks south before policemen riding into the throng scattered the parade. The impromptu demonstration followed a day during which thousands of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers abandoned their trades on a twenty-four-hour strike and attended various protest meetings.

There were various estimates of the number on strike. Labor leaders set the figure at 400,000. Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti emergency committee, said 500,000 was a conservative estimate. Police said 100,000 was a liberal estimate and that the figure was nearer 75,000.

Paris, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Manifestations by French crowds against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti were carried out in several provincial cities yesterday. Paris itself was quiet, although the radical newspapers carried rather flaming headlines.

A number of prominent Frenchmen, including Mme. Curie, the Marquis Guy de Lasteyrie, a grandson of Lafayette; Alfred Dreyfus, the central figure in the famous Dreyfus case; former Minister of Commerce Louis Loucheur and former Minister of Finance Joseph Caillaux, signed appeals to President Coolidge and Governor Fuller, of Massachusetts.

Some cable messages were sent to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in the vague hope that he might be able to do something.

Benjamin S. Connor, president of the chamber of commerce in France and past commander of the post of the American Legion in Paris, Tuesday sent a message of protest to Howard P. Savage, of Chicago, national commander of the American Legion, against a cable sent Monday night by Bowman Elder, chairman of the French committee of the American Legion, who is in Paris arranging for the American Legion convention in September, concerning the attitude of the French people on the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Timely News Items Of Agricultural Extension Service

Fruit spraying demonstration tour was attended by a small handful of Adams county fruit growers. The spraying demonstrations conducted this year were inspected Monday afternoon on the farms of Mrs. Earl Peters, Gardners; Robert Eldon, Aspers, and C. H. Musselman, Arendtsville. Dr. E. L. Nixon and H. E. Hodgkiss, who have supervised the spraying, were present and explained why these demonstrations showed control. In each demonstration checked trees were not sprayed and those present were thoroughly convinced of the value of the spray service recommendations as to timing the sprays in order to get the maximum control.

The only deplorable fact in connection with these demonstrations and the spray service recommendations as given out by Nixon and Hodgkiss is that too few of the Adams county fruit growers are willing to put confidence in the scientific understanding that these men have of the spray program in this county and over the state. There is too much haphazard spraying, too much guess work, too much unsound and unproven salesmanship on the part of commercial concerns selling spray materials to fruit growers and the fruit growers generally take their own biased opinions and those of some salesman for granted rather than take advantage of the true knowledge of the facts and the service of the extension association in trying to help every fruit grower to get a better product. If never before surely this year fruit growers must realize there is only one way to get 99% control and that is by a thorough job of spraying. Those who have followed the timing recommendations of Doctor Nixon and Hodgkiss will have control. Those who have not will eventually come to the realization, as fruit growers in other counties are finding, that this service is scientifically sound, will make them money and save them money. It is free for the asking. We do not expect to force it on anyone.

MECHANICSBURG TO BE AIRPORT

Mechanicsburg is to have a commercial airport. Plans for the flying field were announced Tuesday by H. Russell Gelwicks, Mechanicsburg, who is interested in the project.

The airport will be located in the eastern part of the borough, according to Gelwicks, who has obtained the necessary ground.

Gelwicks will have one airplane at the field. A machine which is now being constructed for his use will be finished and brought to Mechanicsburg within ten days and work on the airport is expected to be started as soon as Gelwicks returns from New York City, where he is attending a conference of aircraft manufacturers' representatives and New York business men interested in furthering aviation.

Gelwicks is eastern representative of the American Eagle Aircraft corporation. His territory includes Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Ohio.

COURTNEY FLIGHT TO U. S. HALTED

Southampton, Eng., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Owing to adverse wind reports Capt. Frank Courtney decided at 9 a. m. that he would not make an attempt this morning to fly to Valentia, Ireland, on the first lap of his trans-atlantic flight. He had been studying weather conditions since 3 a. m. at which time his flying boat was made ready for the hop off and expected to get away about 6:30 a. m.

TO QUIZ KLAN MEN IN FLOGGING

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 10.—(AP)—A grand jury investigation into the flogging of Arthur Hitt, negro, and Dan Mitchell, Clay (Alabama) commercial artist, originally set for yesterday, has been postponed several days because of the absence of Solicitor James Davis, of Jefferson county. Mr. Davis is on a tour of the north and is expected to return to Birmingham soon.

Hitt was whipped when he refused to sell the farm on which he lived. Several days after he was flogged by a band of masked men, he transferred his land for a sum said to be one-sixth of its value.

Mitchell, who is of foreign extraction, was flogged "because he married an American woman."

Before leaving Birmingham recently, Mr. Davis said James Esdale, grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan in Alabama, and other Klan officials would be called before the grand jury to explain threats made to the county prosecutor "if he did not lay off" the flogging investigations.

Doctor And Woman Doomed To Die

St. Martinsville, La., Aug. 10.—(AP)—Imposition of sentences on Mrs. Ada Bonner Leboeuf and Dr. Thomas E. Dreher has been postponed until Friday, Judge James D. Simon said here yesterday. The two, with James Beadle, Morgan City trapper, were convicted last week of murdering James J. Leboeuf, husband of the woman.

The postponement has been allowed, Judge Simon said, to permit defense attorneys to prepare motions for a new trial for Mrs. Leboeuf and Dr. Dreher.

Beadle probably will be sentenced today, it was said, since his attorneys have indicated that they would not seek a retrial. The jury recommended life imprisonment for Beadle and capital punishment of the physician and the woman.

GERMAN PLANES ARE GIVEN TESTS

Dessau, Germany, Aug. 10.—(AP)—The Junker planes which are being groomed for a trans-atlantic flight were taken up Tuesday morning for a brief trial flight. The planes will not take off for the long flight before Saturday.

Hundreds of letters and postcards many of them merely addressed "Mr. Coolidge" are being received here in the hope that they will be taken along. Most of the cards request the president to return them to the senders who are stamp collectors. Henry Ford also figures prominently among the various persons to whom postcards and letters have been addressed.

Medicinal Liquor Not To Be Made

Washington, Aug. 10.—(AP)—The treasury has abandoned all proposals for the resumption of manufacture of medicinal liquor this year. Assistant Secretary Lowman announced Tuesday. Mr. Lowman said that additional whiskey for medicinal purposes might not be needed for several years inasmuch as "an enormous stock" was now on hand. Withdrawals last year amounted to 1,588,000 gallons, he said.

The plan which has been considered was the setting up of several corporations for the manufacture of liquor under government supervision.

German Town Unveils Tablet To Beethoven

Berlin (AP)—Bad Mergentheim, one of the most popular spas in Germany, has unveiled a tablet to Ludwig von Beethoven.

The only town in Germany outside of his native city of Bonn, in which Beethoven lived and worked, was Bad Mergentheim. Vienna, while a German speaking city, belonged to Austria even then.

CHILDREN LOSE ESTATE

Camden, N. J., Aug. 10.—(AP)—The three children of John R. Ditmars Tuesday lost a legal contest for a share of their father's $109,000 estate under an opinion filed by Judge H. B. Ware upholding the probate of the will giving the bulk of the estate to Mrs. Catherine Gallagher, a former cook in the Ditmar home.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE NOTORIOUS LADY"
Lewis Stone, Barbara Bedford and Ann Rork are the featured players of a notable cast in "The Notorious Lady," the Sam E. Rork production for First National, the feature photoplay, at the Strand theatre, tonight and Thursday.

Mr. Stone has the role of John Carew, soldier and adventurer, and, critics says, it is one of the best ever created for him. Miss Bedford is "The Notorious Lady," whose notoriety, incidentally, is gained through a sacrifice for her husband, Carew. Ann Rork, a newcomer in First National pictures, acclaimed for her work in "The Blonde Saint," has a colorful role of a half-caste beauty.

Principal scenes in "The Notorious Lady" are in Africa, where Carew (Stone) seeks to lose his identity and forget the past.

Your NEW CAR

Will it be a 5-year comfort ... or a 5-month cripple?

FROM the day it's broken in—to the day it's broken down, your motor's fate depends on a thin film of oil.

The ability of that oil-film to resist destructive heat and friction largely determines the kind of service your motor gives—the size and frequency of repair bills—the length of your car's life.

If that film of oil breaks and burns under the fierce attacks of heat and friction, vital motor-parts are exposed. Hot, unprotected surfaces chafe against each other. Withering heat attacks raw metal. Insidious friction begins its work of destruction. And you, eventually, pay big repair bills.

In Veedol, Tide Water technologists perfected the oil that masters heat 100 degrees hotter than the hottest friction-spot in your car—the oil that gives the fighting "film of protection," thin as tissue, smooth as silk, tough as steel.

Today, drive to a dealer who displays the orange and black Veedol sign. Have your crankcase drained and refilled with Veedol. It's the best and cheapest insurance on the life of your car.

NUDE BATHERS SEEN ON ROADS

Hagerstown Mayor Reports Seeing Several Girls on Way to Beach Sans Clothing.

Hagerstown, Aug. 10.—Disporting of young girls and youths in the nude along the public highways and private beaches has been brought to the attention of county authorities here, bringing a warning from them of heavy sentences for all those convicted.

Mayor Charles E. Bowman and family, returning from Baltimore Sunday night about 10:30 o'clock, were shocked when three young women, entirely nude, stepped from an automobile parked along the National Highway near Death Curve, just east of this city, and ran nimbly along the side of the road. One of the three girls threw a discarded dress about her when the headlights of the mayor's automobile struck her.

Bathing in the nude by both male and female swimmers is said to be common at private beaches along the Potomac river and Conococheague creek, near here. The authorities for some time have been endeavoring to confirm stories that bathing suits are tabooed at night at these beaches.

That nude bathers also were crossing public highways had not come to the attention of the police until the report reached them from the mayor. Magistrate John H. Bitner, of the local police court, has promised to deal harshly with any arrested.

Out of the Past

Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times, the Film Reveal.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Local Miscellany.—The eating house at Devil's Den, formerly owned by Hon. Wm. H. Tipton, now the property of the U. S. government, is being moved by Contractor William H. Johns to the well between the two Round Tops, and will be occupied by David Weikert on the site of his old land, the battlefield commissioners having granted him this privilege. The butchers claim there is no profit in the business at present. The shirt factory has ceased operation for several weeks. Mrs. Braunreuter is having a flag pole, 58 feet high, erected in front of the Battlefield hotel. A tally-ho party of twelve from Mechanicsburg visited the battlefield last week. They stopped at the Eagle.

Grocery Store Sold.—June F. Tipton, who has been conducting a grocery store on Chambersburg street, very successfully for a number of years, has sold the same to O. Jerome Swartz, of this place, the change to take place September 1.

Improvements.—Dr. J. B. Scott has had the office portion of his property on Chambersburg street torn down and will erect a new building to correspond with his present residence. A Danner Buehler broke ground yesterday for the foundation of his new house, corner of East Middle street and East Confederate avenue.

Interesting Cake Walk.—The cake walk at Hudson park last Thursday evening was witnessed by quite a number of people from town, and was greatly enjoyed by all present. The colored band furnished the music and a number of couples contested for the prizes. Three prizes were awarded by Doctor Hudson and were won as follows: First prize, $3.00 and cake, Walter Bennett and Miss Hillman; second prize, $2.00, Samuel Bainbridge and wife, and third prize, $1, George Brown and sister, Miss Brown.

Diseased Bone Removed.—Drs. Hemminger and Shepley, of Carlisle, performed an operation at Todd hospital in that place on Johnnie, the four year old son of William Shields, near Round Top, for the removal of a diseased bone from the right foot. The diseased bone was the result of a bruise. The little fellow is getting along nicely.

Gettysburg to Have Two Shows.—John Robinson's circus and menagerie will be in Gettysburg on Friday, September 5. This show will be remembered by citizens as having exhibited here some years ago. This show is said to be larger now than at that time, it requiring 43 cars to transport the same, as follows: Ten passenger coaches, 9 stock cars, 1 elephant car, 1 box car, 20 platform cars and two advertising cars.

On September 12, the Welsh Brothers' show will exhibit here. This show has also been here before.

A MOTHER FINDS REST

And now she dwells where neither doubt nor fear
May find her breast;
No crying child may now disturb her here
Or break her rest.

Ended the ache of living. Here she lies
In wondrous peace.
God left a smile about her lovely eyes
With her release.

How oft we fretted her or caused her pain,
We cannot say.
Long hours she watched beside the window pane
With us away.

Her sleep we broke with whimpering and sighs
When we were ill.
Nor thought it much to rouse her with our cries,
As children will.

But now we suffer so, and vainly call
For her to come.
Her feet will never tread again the hall,
The lips are dumb.

Love had no more sweet service to provide,
But this we know,
She'll watch or us upon the other side,
Who tried her so.

Now, let me ponder; let me think,
Just a wink, blinky wink.

Your Uncle Dave, little reader, is trying to recall how we ended the last story. Oh, yes, now I remember, with the help of my Magic Thinking Cap and its silky tassels! The two little rabbits, Uncle Lucky and his bunny nephew, you know, were visiting the Old Brown Horse. Just then who should come by, but Professor Jim Crow, his Wisdom Book under his wing and a large pair of spectacles on his bill.

"Just in time to teach you something," he cawed, looking solemnly at the little bunny, and opening his Wisdom Book, he began to read aloud: "Though animals do not have hands, they have different parts which they use to do some of the things that human beings do with their hands."

"You are perfectly right, Professor," agreed dear Uncle Lucky. But the Old Brown Horse never said a word; instead, he commenced to crop the tender green grass.

"Just look at your friend cutting the grass with his front teeth," exclaimed the old Crow. "He takes up almost any kind of food—a potato, an apple—with his front teeth. These teeth, then, answer for hands to him. His lips answer, also, the same purpose in many cases. He gathers his oats into his mouth with his lips. The lips are for hands to him. He feels things with his lips, just as little boys and girls do with the tips of their fingers."

"You've made quite a study of horses, eh?" interposed the good old steed, turning to look at the old Crow. "Yes, and in this Wisdom Book of mine," cawed the professor bird, tapping it with his bill, "I have jotted down many things. Just listen to this: 'A horse has in his mouth a cutting machine and a mill! He has two kinds of teeth. Front teeth for cutting and back teeth for grinding.'"

"I agree with you," laughed the good old steed. "But let me say something. I want to tell my little friendly rabbit a story. Many years ago, when I was young and frisky, my master harnessed me to a rubber-tired sulky and took me out to the track. I felt very proud with several of his friends gathered around to admire me. "He looks like a winner," said one. "He's a beauty," said another, but when they timed my first quarter mile, no one said anything. And when the mile was finished every one looked disappointed—all but my kind master. He patted my neck and whispered: "Never mind, old boy; you've got it in you. I know you have!"

"Well, if I've got any speed in me I'm going to show it the next chance I get. I'm not going to lose my master's faith in me," I promised myself. A few months later I was entered in a big race. Although I got off with a poor start, I was soon up with the leaders. Suddenly I heard the crack of a whip, which plainly told me that the horse close beside me was being urged on for the final spurt. I leaped forward and amid the shouts of the grandstand won the race."

"How did you do it?" asked the little rabbit.

"By putting out all my speed at the finish, for that's where it counts," answered the Old Brown Horse.

NO pipe smoker figures fine tobacco as an extravagance . . . but it does seem foolish to charge you five cents extra for a bulky pocket tin . . . especially when the new Granger foil package keeps your tobacco in perfect condition. Quality inside . . . but sensible economy outside that explains

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BRAIN MUSCLES

IN MY reading somewhere I came across the two words which are the topic of this talk. They made me think.

Now, of course, there are no muscles in the brain. The brain is a mass of cells—cells of the most marvelous make-up. But let us just imagine that the brain is made up of finely constructed muscles. What then?

Well, first of all—exercise for those muscles. Nothing lives, except as it is put to use.

How does the brain grow? Through use, through feeding, through exercise. Certainly if you put nothing into your mind you are not going to take anything out.

The brain is a great store house. Recently some one found in an old dump heap in an ancient building in Boston the original manuscript of the school oration of Daniel Webster. Years after, when Webster had become a national figure, he delivered his great reply to Hayne. By comparing this early oration with the great reply of Webster, it was found that the peroration of both was nearly the same, word for word!

Where did Webster keep those words all those years? Where else but in that mighty brain—stored away for a bigger use when that time should come.

The hard working youth never knows when those muscles, trained upon the farm at hard labor, or in the shop, or on the college athletic field, may come into their own. The brain must have a healthy, strong body to depend upon. There are few strong minds in weak bodies.

By forming a habit of reading and talking with those whose mind has been more heavily stored than your own, you grow.

If there were really muscles in the brain, no one could see them. But any one would know that the muscles were there just the minute you spoke!

The development of the mind is one of the most noble pursuits of this life.

Emmett Marlow of Killanmaul, Ireland, emigrates to America and is followed by Sheila Kildare, to whom he is betrothed, and her father. Sheila begins to learn that Emmett is a boaster and unworthy of her love. She makes friends with the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional boxer. Emmett, although he evades marriage with her, nevertheless is jealous of Rory. Rory and Sheila spend a holiday at the famous Coney Island.

The musicians, a violin, a cello and an accordion player, gave their concert up the river and the program was not all jazz. Old tunes, melodies that carry the mind back to pleasant little homes with singing mothers, and jig tunes for merry-making were the offerings of these entertainers, content with nickels and dimes gathered in a battered felt hat from among the passengers.

Now and then a child cried, but it was a quiet crowd, men, women, children, all worn with the frolic of the day, home-going to whatever their modest fortunes provided for them, whether it was a tenement on the East Side or a flat up Harlem way.

"Did you enjoy the day?" Rory asked softly.

"Oh, it was wonderful. It is the most beautiful day I have ever spent in America. But it made me sad to see an' hear the sea, for we lived on the hills just above it at Killanmaul. Some day ye their own chance with the Frenchman. Tree was a vigorous, wiry little fellow, a dynamo of energy. He was well over forty and knew how to train athletes to the 'nth of perfection. Tree conducted his camp with military-like discipline. Fighters paid well for privileges, but none of them were permitted any infractions of Jimmy Tree's rules. If a boxer did not like the way Tree ran the camp that boxer could ferry home to Broadway. No man's money looked good to Jimmy if the man would not follow the rules.

Personal habits were the first consideration. When the candidate arrived, whether professional or amateur, Jimmy admitted business men who wanted to keep fit as well as boxers. Jimmy would summon him to the little private office in the main building.

"You know you're here to train, don't you? Well, train. I can't help you if you don't want to help yourself. No man can be an athlete unless he wants to; nobody can make an athlete out of any carcass just because he pays down a fee for it. Your money's not half as much to me as my reputation, so if you don't follow the rules you can't stay here. That's that." It was to the man who never had been a guest of Jimmy's camp to whom he was most belligerent and emphatic.

"I don't know you, 'cept by reputation," he would say. "You win some fights and maybe you're good. I don't know. Maybe you'd be better if you'd been handled better. A fighter's got to be good if he can last ten years in this game. And he's got to be good all the time, from the first bell to the last and in between. I'm no preacher, but let me tell you that any boy that lives right has a better chance than his opponent who doesn't. The fellow who lives right has always got the edge on the other fellow, and that's what we're all looking for, whether it's in the ring or in business."

Each applicant for entrance filled out a health questionnaire which he sent in with his request for admission. It was more of a habit questionnaire than one of health. The candidate set forth the number of hours of sleep he averaged, number of cigars or cigarettes per day, amount of alcohol consumed every twenty-four hours, his daily exercise and other facts that Jimmy would scan closely while he laid forth the laws in his private office.

"Forty cigarettes a day! Man, man, and how do you keep breathing at all is more than I can understand. A dozen cocktails! You'll get no cocktails here, and I may as well tell you now that your baggage is being searched right this minute and my men are as good as the customs officers at the docks."

And what keeps you up until three and four in the morning? Parties at night clubs, eh? Oh, you can't sleep! We'll fix that. That comes from night clubs, you know, that can't sleep excuse. Sleep's a habit like everything else. You can get out of a habit just the same as you get into one, and that goes for good habits as well as bad. Now here, lights are out at nine o'clock and every man must be in bed. And he'll sleep after the first three days, I'm telling you. We're up and dressed at six—half-past five rail. One hour of road work; you'll walk at first if you haven't been getting any exercise; later I'll put you through the paces.

"Breakfast at seven, and don't ask for more than is put in front of you. I know just what you need and just how much. Three days of this and then I'll know precisely what you do need and your day will be laid out for you. It's up to you to follow it to the letter."

Most of the professional boxers knew Jimmy's strict regime and it was seldom, except with amateurs, that he had to outline the routine in so much detail, but even to those who had attended his camp before he constantly preached the creed that he followed regarding physical betterment.

"A man can be just what he wants to be, but it's strictly up to him." Many's the youngster in the game that Jimmy Tree has set on the right road to a long and creditable ring career, even though he may never have been acclaimed champion. "Train between fights by cutting out all unhealthy habits; then you won't have to train so hard when you get a match," he would tell them over and over.

Jimmy was glad to have Rory O'Shea. He liked him and respected him for his clean ways of living. Reagan's letter requesting reservation of quarters was immediately answered with a postscript: "And I hope Rory wins; he deserves a win."

Sheila had seen little of Rory in the two weeks after the visit to Coney Island. He was busy with his manager and when they did meet it was in the O'Sheas' flat. (To be continued)

"An' what will become of us now?"

should see Killanmaul an' Knockbotherum an' the countryside beyond Knockbotherum, from where yer father came."

"I should like to see it with you, Sheila Kildare," spoke up the O'Shea, and he added quickly and gaily, "Wait till we're all rich and maybe we can!"

They fell into silence again, watching the lights which flickered on shore. Sheila gasped.

"Rory! Rory O'Shea!" she cried as if stricken. "My locket! My good luck locket, 'tis gone! I've lost it!"

When the O'Shea had quieted her Sheila told him about the visit to Knockbotherum Fair and the prophecy of the old fortune teller. "Wear it always," she told me," Sheila said, "an' never lose it, for if you do the imps will be climbing yer back to make trouble for ye."

"An' what will become of us now, what with father not wanting to work an' the bit of the savings we had a-going an' a-going, an' me with my good luck charm lost forever."

Rory gently tried to quiet her fears, and while Sheila pretended that she would not worry so much as the eldest minute over her loss, nevertheless there was no singing in her heart when she climbed the stairs slowly in the tenement in Hell's Kitchen.

CHAPTER VI

Rory O'Shea's fight with Campear, the Frenchman, was two months away and Rory needed outdoor training. It was the last of September and Jack Reagan, his manager, arranged for him to train in Jimmy Tree's famous camp in New Jersey. A dozen fighters were quartered there, some shaping up for bouts already contracted, others hopefully keeping in trim for matches to be made that winter. There were no ring stars at Jimmy Tree's, but the men were good "prelim" material, the sort who fight every second and who warm up the crowds for the finals. Many of these men Rory had fought. He was popular with them all, and he would get plenty of sparring workouts with men who, if they were not the equals of Campear, were in his class. Some of them hoped for
